SACRIFICE AND HARD WORK MAKE FOR REAL SUCCESS

Vocational School Student
Writes Story Which Louis
Robinson Told There

By MARGARET HEYER

It is interesting to notice how great a factor in one's life is education. To gain a good education one must struggle unceasingly, work and learn constantly. One is repaid doubly for his efforts. An excellent illustration of this is demonstrated by the life of David Sarnoff, who at the age of thirty-two is at the head of the largest wireless corporation in the world.

David Sarnoff was born in a little village in the southern part of Russia in 1891.

The Sarnoff family which consisted of three small boys and their parents were very poor and their bare existence was managed and provided for by the father whose business was that of trading.

The ambition of the parents was to educate their eldest son to become a Rabbi like his uncle. At the age of six he was sent to his uncle who lived at Kornea a village a thousand miles away from his home.

His lessons at this place were very hard to learn especially for one so young. He had to memorize two thousand words a day and on Thursday had to recite his weeks lesson which was 12,000 words. His punishment was severe if he did not know his lesson. He did not like this work and always dreamed of going to America.

"The Land of Promise."

One day to his joy he received a letter from his mother saying that they would start for America soon. They were very glad to leave Russia because of its unsettled people, its poverty and strife.

They had a hard voyage but their buoyant hopes kept up their courage until their arrival. They settled in the ghetto district where most of the Jewish people lived and Mr. Sarnoff worked very hard to provide for his family. David was then nine years old and his first position was that of a delivery boy for a butcher. Later on his father from hard work and chronic asthma was unable to work.

The responsibilities of caring for the family were forced onto David who was now selling papers. He knew that to rise to any good position he would have to have an education so he rose at four o'clock every morning, delivered his papers and then attended school. He was handicapped by his ignorance of the American language, but after learning the alphabet he advanced rapidly and within a year could read and speak the English language.

At school he learned about Abraham Lincoln and how he had educated himself. He had much respect and admiration for Lincoln and resolved to work hard and achieve success as did Lincoln.

He advanced himself in his work and bought a newspaper route in the Irish district. By this time his teachers were old enough to take care of his business and he decided to go into the commercial world.

His only knowledge of work was in the line of newspapers. He accepted a job as office boy in a telephone office at the salary of $5.00 a week. His ambition was to become an operator. He studied constantly, bought a set and practiced alone. He was given a trial at operating and after he had made good at that he was given more work in that line. He accepted positions that others did not want because he knew he could learn this way. From then on his rise was made rapidly but only through his own efforts.

His ideas of the essentials of success are, that one should learn the power of expression in writing and speaking.

He advocates learning to do some one thing at least as well as anyone else and if possible, better.

He has made excellent use of an education that was gained through labor and self-sacrifice.

The helpful story was related in the Vocational School assembly Friday by Afternoon Louis Robinson at an address during Education Week.

Says—Now Stiff Joints Must Go!

New Discovery Limbers 'Em Up and Ever the Creaking Ceases.

Yes! It's true—the world progresses.

All you have to do nowadays to limber up that stiff, rusty knee joint is to squeeze a half inch of miracle working substance from a tube.

Then rub it on the offending part for about a quarter of a minute or until it soaks through the skin and disappears on its errand of mercy.

Then read the evening newspapers and go to bed.

The chances are that your misbehaving knee joint will lose its "creak" while you are dreaming about the high fences you used to leap when you were a youngster.

"And in the morning," says one who has tried the new discovery, "you'll feel so happy that you'll want to jump into your sportiest clothes and walk briskly down the street just to show the neighbors that you are not as old as they think you are."

Joint Ease: They call this wonder working substance, for the reason that when ordinary remedies fail to limber up the stiff, inflamed rheumatic joint, or reduce the swelling, Joint-Ease succeeds.

It's a good name for a good, clean, stablest prescription that in just a few months has proven to a multitude of people that lame, swollen, distorted joints can speedily have the kinks taken out of them and work as smoothly as ever.

But Joint Ease is for bothersome joints, whether in knee, ankle, hip, shoulder, spine or finger, and for that purpose its sale is immense.

All druggists have a big supply of it and druggists everywhere report a big demand.

City Business

OFFICIALS who bear the burden of carrying on the city's business are often admonished about their extravagance in bonding for public improvements. La Crosse is not the exception. It is, of course, the duty of public officials to observe strict economy and prudence in their handling of public monies. But could their adverse critics be compelled to assume the responsibility of city management, they might alter their views.

It is often said city officials should avoid bonds because the interest account runs high. We are told, for instance, that La Crosse's interest account is $123,000 a year. Plainly we could do lots in the way of city improvement with $123,000. However, the city official has no simple formula for the solving of this problem. There are two ways in which city improvements could be paid for, one by bonding, and the other by paying as we go each year out of that year's taxes. Taxpayers who are inclined to wince at $123,000 a year paid in interest would gasp if they were compelled to pay out of pocket for the improvements which this city requires in order to keep step with its normal growth. We are building today toward a city of 50-odd thousand ten years hence. A niggardly policy of public improvement would be fatal to the future La Crosse and a betrayal of posterity.

It may be said in passing that the interest payments of the city are not the loss to the taxpayer which they appear to be. By paying this interest, the principal, raised by bonds, remains in the possession of the taxpayers, and if they are prudent the chances are that they are earning with it in the aggregate a sum considerably larger than the interest payments of the municipality.

When improvements are made by bonding the principle involved is that by this method there is brought about an equalization of the burden. Streets and public buildings constructed today will be used by citizens 10, 20 and 30 years hence. It seems, therefore, no more than fair that these future users of public improvements should help to pay for them, and that is what happens when long time bonds foot the bill.

It is a common habit, especially among politicians, to promise reduction of taxes. We hear it in every national, state and city campaign. Largely, it is the "bunk." In a growing and expanding county or city there never is permanent tax reduction. There may be retrenchment brought about by war and its aftermath, but no matter how high taxes go, they never come back to lower levels to stay. The progress of civilization is enabling us to do more and more things better and cheaper through collective agencies such as government, and the greater and wider the service rendered by government, the higher the cost. We may as well expect to be taxed substantially and the measure of merit relating to the taxed had better be whether or not we get a run for our money.

We Should Worry

IN his first campaign address after his return to Great Britain Mr. Lloyd George landed on Premier Baldwin with a statement that the prime minister had been too hasty in funding the debt to America. His insinuation was that Baldwin had been bluffed by America into settling the bill before it was necessary, and the implication has lacerated some American feelings. This is rather strange, all things considered. We should have sufficient experience of politicians in this country to know that there is nothing surprising in a stump-speaker saying what he believes will make a hit with his audience. Lloyd George is making a campaign against the "ins," and like others more familiar to us he finds his ammunition in criticism of their conduct. The point for us to consider is that the funding agreement is signed, sealed and delivered. We are collecting the money that is due us. If the British want to make a political issue of this water below the dam, that is their business. It can make no difference to us. One suspects that Lloyd George would not be so definite about the folly of paying the war-debt if the arrangement had not been definitely concluded. If the settlement were still pending the question of British obligations would be in the area of statesmanship and practical affairs. It would be a subject requiring contemplation of consequences in discussion. Being settled, it is merely in the realm of oratory and partisan rhetoric. What is said is of small importance against what has been done.

Beer

A STEIN of beer costs over a billion marks in Germany, and word comes over the cables that the Germans are losing their thirst. Sailors over there are reported practically deserted. High price is the original prohibition agent. You can tell just how effective prohibition is in any community, by the price being paid for "the stuff." Our country might be a lot drier now if Uncle Sam had approached prohibition by taxing whisky $10 a quart. Many who willingly pay a bootlegger that much would balk if the government got the money.

Eaters

GERMANY will have to import a lot of food, but she has produced more food this year than she consumed last year. This is the official report from Squire, Uncle Sam's agricultural commissioner in Berlin. Germany's crops this year are the largest since the war, "but food consumption since the war has been below the pre-war standard and consumption this year cannot equal the pre-war standard unless a considerable amount is imported."

A man's less apt to pay his bills when he's hungry.

Shadow-Boxing

NINETEEN thousand separate pieces of legislation, bills, were introduced in the last session of congress. There'll probably be as many during the winter session. We have a national delusion that all that's needed to solve a problem is to pass a law. And this delusion seems particularly assertive in problems which are beyond the reach of legislation, and which are solvable only by economic or moral evolution, often both.

Strength

GEORGE N. CROW, Ottawa contractor, claims he has the strongest team of horses in the world. George says his team, weighing 3600 pounds, recently hauled a 34,000-pound piece of machinery 500 feet, in a six-ton vehicle. Fortunately the motor truck is rapidly putting an end to this sort of thing. Rather late in the day, it's discovered that a can of pebbles, rattled by the driver, stimulates a horse more than a whip.

The Thanksgiving Strike

By JANE OSBORN

It was a bright, crisp day in early November and Bob Norton was with a smile on his face, got out of bed on the right side and whistled "Dixie" loudly while he shaved. It seemed to him that the day was going to be joyous. A few remarks from his sister Dora at breakfast that morning so dashed his spirits with ice water that by the time he reached the office he walked with drooping steps, the corners of his mouth were turned down and he had been able to whistle at all it would have been the Dead March from "Saul" or "Old Black Joe."

He avoided his partner, Walter Granger, as much as he could without making this fact seem obvious. Yet he knew that soon or late he would have to impart the depressing information to him. It wasn't the fact of itself, so much, but the situation which the fact indicated, that was so depressing. Yet Bob Norton couldn't have foreseen in words just what the situation was.

Walter Granger, who had apparently also risen in a gloomy frame of mind, had remained joyous, and at 12:30 o'clock went into his partner's private office, clapped him on the back and in a hearty, almost amusing, said:

"There up, Bob, I'll take you to lunch if you'll promise not to be so crumby."

Bob accepted, feeling that perhaps it would not be so difficult to make his little announcement to his partner in the accompaniment of a tempting luncheon.

The opportunity came when they lingered over their pumpkin pie and coffee.

"I'd say this was good pie," said Walter Granger, still smiling. "I'd say if I had a lot of pie, I'd give it to you."

Dora makes. Gosh, but that's good, and there was an expression of anti-epithet.

"She can," agreed Bob. "That reminds me, Dora has gone on a sort of strike. She won't let you know where she is, and she says if you come out for Thanksgiving, it's ten years now you've been coming—and when I spoke of it last night, I thought of course it was going to be the same as usual. But well, Dora has been thinking things over and she has—"

"I don't know," she said, "I'm going to have Thanksgiving dinner at home. She has been figuring the price of turkey, and she says it would be cheaper to go to the Mountain Inn and that the dinner there is just as good and it's a lot more interesting to go where you can see other people, and that it will save her a lot of work and—"

A look of annoyance came over Walter Granger's face—anyway, he and actual sadness.

"Funny, isn't it?" was all he managed to say. "Then there was a check, and she says it's each took a mouthful of pumpkin pie and found it rather tasteless."

"That I don't see," ventured Walter. "But if I sent her the turkey it would make any difference, of course. I know she doesn't really have to live on the coast of turkey, but I know how thirty some women are. You could say I had it sent to me, and so she wouldn't think I bought it purpose."

"I'm afraid not," said Bob. "I thought of that, too, and said that I thought I'd have it sent to me, but she said I could send it to the Salvation Army."

"Funny," said Walter. "I never thought your sister Dora was like that."

Walter always referred to her as "your sister Dora," and Bob's sister Dora it seemed less familiar than simply "Dora." When he addressed her he never called her anything but "Dora."

Bob's state of mind was somewhat like Bob's. He was disappointed, of course, at the immediate prospect of not having a home Thanksgiving dinner with Bob and his sister Dora. But aside from that there was a feeling as if something had been wrong. Dora had seemed so permanent and so unchangeable. There were a dozen girls whom Walter knew better than he did Dora, but during the ten years that he had been Bob's partner there was no girl that he had felt stood more definitely for all the old-fashioned feminine virtues than Dora. He had thought of her that way when she was eighteen, as he did now, that she was twenty-eight. From the first he had always assured himself that he would like to get better acquainted with her, and he had promised himself.

But first there had been Alice and Maud, who took so much of his time that he had none left for Dora. She had seemed so permanent and sensible that he felt that that pleasure might safely be postponed. She wasn't the foolish sort of girl who would think of marrying young, he had convinced himself, so there was no hurry. He could not get acquainted with her any more. Then there had been the brief and stormy session with Hester, and so it had gone.

During intervals between these little episodes he had spent more time than usual at the Norton home, and had found infinite comfort in Dora's serene presence.

There was a sense of satisfaction in observing that Dora's suitors were few, and that when he did encounter men at the Norton home it was perfectly obvious that Dora was not encouraging them to come. "It's nice to think that there still are girls who fashion themselves responsible."

Bob had hoped that Walter Granger would show no special concern over the change of plans, but obviously he had taken it as much to heart as had Bob.

"Nothing wrong with your sister Dora," Walter Granger said, "she's just a little bit more about to depart for his suburban home."

"Now that I know of," said Bob. "I called this evening? We might have a few hands of dummy bridge."

Walter carried a five pound box of Dora's favorite candies to the Norton's that night and laid it casually on a living room table without indicating that it was for Dora. When she was not looking he regarded her closely. She certainly looked well enough. She had never looked better. Perhaps he had better find out. Walter felt himself feeling very uncomfortable. Could he possibly be jealous?

"So well, then at the Mountain Inn Thanksgiving?" he began. "Good of you and Bob not to leave me out. That will make four of us."

"Who's the fourth?" asked Dora. "That's what I want to know," said Walter. "I supposed that you would have a guest."

"Dear knows," said Dora. "I suppose I might ask another girl, but it's always been so nice with just the three of us I hated to do it. I—"

"Dora," interrupted Walter, "I don't really mind eating Thanksgiving dinner at the inn. I thought of course I always like your dinner better than any other, but Bob and I have been worried. It doesn't seem like you to give up the old family party. You have always been so old-fashioned and different from other girls."

"Why, Walter?" laughed Dora. "I've known you ten years and you never talked that way before. You never even called me Dora to my face. If you want to have the dinner here, why not just as soon? To be sure I've told Kacie she could have the day off, but I guess we three could manage to wait on ourselves."

"Dora, how good!" said Walter, feeling now that after all the old world was spinning around on its axis in the same old way. He looked at Dora and Dora looked whimsically back at him. "Dora," he stammered. "I guess I love you—in love with you want to marry you. I didn't begin to realize how I felt on the subject until you said we'd eat at the inn— Tell me you love me a little, Dora."

Dora laughed, but not unkindly. "I suppose I do. I suppose I always have," she said. "I should have gone on this Thanksgiving strike several years ago if I had known how you and Bob would take it."

OPERETTA SCORES HIT AT THE HIGH SCHOOL TUESDAY

Glee Clubs Present Fine Little Musical Play to Appreciative Audience

The glee clubs of the La Crosse High school presented a delightful operetta entitled "On Plymouth Rock," in the high school auditorium Tuesday evening. One could not witness this pretty evidence of youthful effort without a revived hope for the love of the artistic in the future. The operetta itself taught its lesson of patriotic worth and its sermon of thankfulness appropriate to the season. The sweet and simple expression of real musical thought throughout the sketch awakened an appreciative response in the minds of all present.

Mrs. Whipple, the director, is to be complimented on her splendid interpretation and charming working out of this production. One could easily recognize the clever touches of Miss Muley's dramatic sense of all that was necessary to bring out the appealing theme. The attractive choruses of young people presented a novel scene in their quaint and picturesque costumes. Rather, they presented a panorama of pictures, the loveliest of which was doubtless the assembly at prayer.

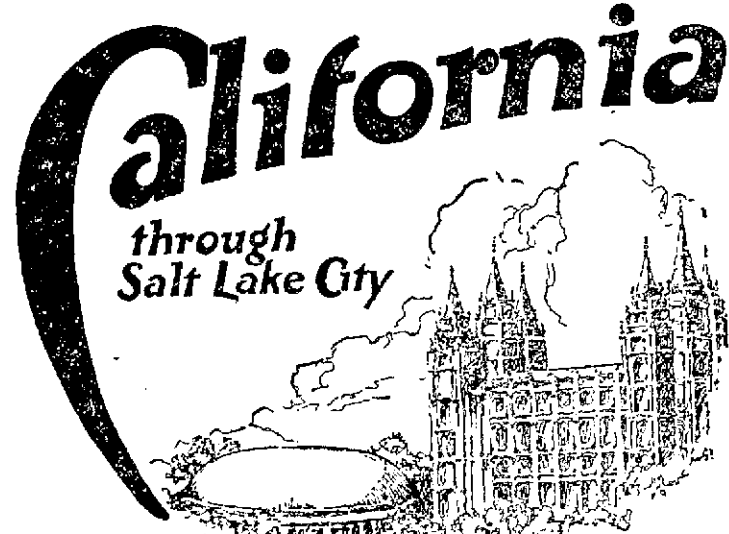

It is hard to pick a real star from the group of principals for they all did very well. The work of Charlotte Williams as Irisella and of Don McDonough as John Alden were remarkably sweet and natural. Phyllis Boutley as Anne Goodly was a typical Puritan maiden and gave character to the whole. Joseph Holley, playing the part of Governor Winslow, was surely an imposing old grandee.

If one were to suggest a strikingly effective part, it would likely be the duet and chorus, "Can You Tell Me, Sir?" which was so pleasingly sweet and tuneful it lingered long in the minds of the hearers. It is to be hoped that the future will bring us more of these musically artistic operettas under Mrs. Whipple's able direction.

JAMES RAWLINSONS GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATION HELD

MR. AND MRS. James Rawlinson, 1117 South Seventh street, were guests of honor at a handsome celebration on Tuesday in compliment to their golden wedding anniversary, which was given by their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Rawlinson, and their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Dodge, at the home of the former, 1115 South Seventeenth street.

Dinner was served at five o'clock, from one long table, covers being laid for twenty-three, the guests including their two children, five grandchildren, Mrs. D. J. Dwyer, Mrs. E. E. Bernatz and their husbands, Miss Helen Rawlinson, Miss Ruth Dodge and Master Mickey Rawlinson, and three great grandchildren, Mary Ellen and Elizabeth Jean Bernatz, and Master Billy Dwyer. The other relatives present were Mrs. William Rawlinson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rawlinson and daughter, Terza, of St. Paul, Mr. Frank Alard and son, Frank Alard, of Ottumwa, Iowa, Mrs. Octavia Preschke, Mrs. Jennie DeHoff and Miss Mattie Rawlinson of this city.

The table was beautifully dressed, the central feature of which was a golden vase filled with natural roses, placed on a lace center piece. At either end was a pair of gold tapers in golden sticks. All the small dishes were gold and the larger china was gold banded. The name cards in harmony marked the places. Great jars and baskets of huge yellow chrysanthemums were placed about the room.

Mr. and Mrs. Rawlinson were showered with gifts, telegrams and messages of congratulation with best wishes for happy returns of the day. The bride of fifty years carried a bouquet of roses similar to those used on the table.

In the evening a reception was held when one hundred and fifty guests were entertained.

CENTURY CLUB CASTS BALLOT FOR PRESIDENT

Meeting of Twentieth Century Club on Tuesday is An Interesting One

On Tuesday afternoon the Twentieth Century club met in the Y. W. C. A. rooms. The program was an interesting one, and one especially interesting feature was the casting of a ballot by the club members for the next president of the United States. The club house-keeping magazine is making a poll, and the General Federation of Women's clubs is co-operating with Good Housekeeping.

Forty-five ballots were cast by women of the Twentieth Century club with the following results: Calvin Coolidge, 35; Henry Ford, 1; Herbert Hoover, 2; C. G. Hughes, 3; William McAdoo, 2; Clifford Pinchot, 1; O. W. Underwood, 1.

Mrs. A. L. McKee gave an excellent paper on "Women in Music." She dwelt especially on American women musicians, and composers, and the work of the National Federation of Music clubs.

Mrs. Odin J. Oren, who spent the past summer in Europe, told in a most interesting way of her visit in Italy. Cathedrals which she and Mr. Oren visited were described, and her talk on the sculpturing, and the beautiful mural decorations was supplemented by pictures illustrating these.

Mr. A. J. Leeder and a male quartet of students from the Normal school sang a group of Scotch songs, "My Ain Country," and "In the Gloaming."

The hostesses for the day were Mrs. Frank Winter, Mrs. E. L. Walters, Mrs. C. T. Callaway and Mrs. F. A. Douglas.

LENROOT ASSERTS BLAINE FIGURES ARE NOT STRAIGHT

Challenges Governor's Tax Statement in Vigorous Talk at Merrill

MERRILL, Wis. — (Challenging Governor John J. Blaine's Darlington speech on taxes in a speech here Tuesday night, Senator Lenroot asserted that many of the governor's statements as to the state's financial condition are untrue and as to the political effect.

Referring to the governor's statement that federal tax reductions affected only 80 people in Wisconsin, the senator declared that practically every taxpayer in Wisconsin had his federal taxes reduced, some having their federal taxes entirely wiped out. For instance, the income tax of one having an income of $2,000, he said, was reduced 50 per cent, while excises affecting every family were materially reduced. He repeated that on the other hand, state taxes had increased, and he said every increase was by legislation that must be signed by the governor or passed over his veto.

Blaine Referred to Record
Referring to the governor's assertion that the Senator (Lenroot) shared responsibility for the federal tax law, he referred the governor to the state record, which showed that Senator Lenroot had voted against the law.

A portion of Senator Lenroot's speech follows:
"On Nov. 13 Governor Blaine made a speech at Darlington in which he denied the accuracy of certain figures given by me as to certain expenditures and federal taxes in Wisconsin."

"After discussing the reduction in federal taxes collected from the people of Wisconsin, I said:
Quotes From Bulletin
"I am sorry that I cannot bring you the same good news regarding the expenses of our state government, for while the federal taxes have been cut in two, the expenditures out of the state treasury, in the short space of five years, have been doubled. I quote from an official bulletin of the department of commerce:
"The department of commerce announces that according to reports made to the Bureau of the Census, the cost of government for the state of Wisconsin for fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, amounted to $34,822,118, which was a per capita cost of $12.92; in 1915 the per capita cost was $6.48 and in 1914, $6.41. The totals for these years being $16,447,953 and $15,830,325 respectively."

"These are the figures Governor Blaine attacks. They are not figures made by me, but by a department of the United States government. His quarrel concerning them, therefore, is not with me but with the department of commerce at Washington. Governor Blaine is the governor of the state."

"If the department of commerce has made to the public false statements concerning state expenditures, it is his duty as governor to officially demand of that department a correction of their figures. He has not done so, and knowing something of the accuracy of the work of that department, I predict that he will not do so—because I am confident their figures are correct."
"But the governor also attempts to discuss federal taxes, and if his statements as to state taxes are as false as are his statements regarding the federal taxes, no reliance can be placed on any statement that he makes."

"The tax law to which the senator refers did reduce taxes as to certain individuals all the way from one to 50 per cent, but there were only 80 such tax payers in Wisconsin. As to the other 2,700,000 people in Wisconsin, no reduction for them. Their taxes were increased and the increase was actually done."

"How Governor Blaine dared to make such a statement, I cannot understand, for every man who paid an income tax in 1921 and 1922 can look up his own records and find that the federal taxes he paid were actually less than in the year before. In Wisconsin resulting a reduction, every married man in 1922 received a reduction of less than $5.00 received a reduction of $2.00 if his taxes would have amounted to that much. A married man having a net income of $250 received a reduction of 100 per cent under the new law he had nothing to pay while under the old law he would have paid $2.50. If he had income was $7,000, under the old law he would have paid $10, while under the new law he paid only $2.50 a reduction of 64 per cent."

"As to the exact number of persons in Wisconsin receiving this reduction, I have no figures, but in 1921 out of 2,747,777 persons in Wisconsin, making income tax returns, 17,375 had net incomes of less than $250, and the remainder of between $250 and $5,000 per year. I have not the figures as to how many of these were married, but all were entitled to the benefits of the reduction. This is somewhat different from the statement of Governor Blaine that the persons who were benefited by the reduction of the law, were only 80 people."

"The old law gave an exemption of $2,000 to each family and $750 for each dependent person under 18 years of age. The new law cut the exemption of $2,000 to $500, and $100 instead of $750 for each dependent person under 18 years of age."

BANKERS' BANQUET IS BIG FUNCTION ON TUESDAY NIGHT

Organization of a local chapter of the American Institute of Banking is imminent as a result of developments at the first annual banquet of the La Crosse Clearing House association, last night.

The meeting, which was attended by 112 bank officers, directors and employees, was the most successful function ever held by local bankers and will be prolific, it was said today, of the formation of a new organization within the banks, to educate employees and improve banking service.

Clarence L. Chaney of the Northwestern National Bank, Minneapolis, president of the American Institute of Banking, told of the rapid growth of the organization, which now has 132,000 members and of the achievements of the institute in educating young bankers in banking methods and practices and encouraging them to study and work for higher positions.

The proposition of organizing a local chapter of the American Institute of Banking was put up to the employees to consider and favorable action is expected at a subsequent meeting, employees of the banks said today.

Basel Peterson, formerly of Blair and La Crosse, gave an interesting talk on European banking practices, compared to those in this country. Peterson is now with the Chemical National Bank of New York City, having recently returned from Europe, where he was representative of the Central City Bank of New York.

Other speakers at the banquet last night were A. V. Gardner, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Winona, and W. G. Cason, assistant secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers' association.

Officers of the Clearing House association follow:
E. M. Wing, president; J. M. Holley, vice president; Richard Ray, secretary; treasurer; George W. Burton, chairman clearing house committee; Committee on arrangements for banquet: R. T. Whitley, chairman; Herman O. Klein, J. A. Thwing, Mrs. H. K. Holley.

Committee on program: Clarence Johnson, George McLachlan, Miss Millie Wendling.

MILLION AND HALF LOSS IN FIRE ON DOCKS AT DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich. — Fire starting from an overheated stove in a warehouse on the Detroit River destroyed the Detroit and Windsor Perry company dock housing, United States Immigration and customs office building, which was burned to the ground, and then destroyed a four-story warehouse and several small buildings. The total loss was estimated at $1,500,000.

The fire-swept section, at the foot of Woodward avenue, was one of the oldest in the city, and some of the buildings burned had been standing fifty years.

Three persons were injured, one probably seriously. The fire started in the Munger building, which was destroyed by the fire. The flames spread to the firemen could conquer them. On another floor of the Munger block was the factory of the Eaton-Clark company, dye and varnish makers, and small explosions there hampered the firemen.

MOTHER SURRENDERS IN MURDER CASE TO SEE INFANT AGAIN

Fugitive Comes Back to be Close to Two-year-old Daughter

CHICAGO.—A mother here, charged with the murder of her husband, Mrs. Katherine Mahan, 19 years old, gave herself up Tuesday night to the police who have sought her since the alleged confession of her husband, Edward Mahan, a watchman during an attempted burglary of a knit goods factory three weeks ago.

When she fled to Indianapolis after the arrest of her husband last Friday, she left a two-year-old daughter with her sister here. Her only reason for returning and surrendering, she told police, was the hope that she would see the child again.

Questioned regarding her connection with the shooting in which she received a slight wound, she corroborated her husband's statements, detectives say, and completed the evidence which will free Walter Brockelmann and Robert Beck, indicted for the killing. Brockelmann has been held since the death of the girl, according to the police, made a false confession in which she said he had killed Mahan and stated that she was the woman accomplice, now known by the police to have been Mrs. Mahan.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Menthol-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly soothes the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Menthol-Sulphur at any drug store.

"THE GOLD DIGGERS" The picture version of David Belasco's noted stage success, "The Gold Diggers," has been announced for the Rivoli theater starting today.

"The Gold Diggers" in its original form, enjoyed a two years' run on Broadway and an extended showing in the principal cities of the country, everywhere meeting with the most unusual success.

This picture tells of the gay and merry life led by a certain class of chorus girls and actresses, popularly known as "gold diggers."

Two of the special features in this picture are the exact and true reproductions of a complete "behind the scenes" set showing in full detail the dressing rooms, the chorus girls dressing and getting ready for the act, and all the bustle and bustle of a real musical comedy.

Showing Jerry Langer, the leading actor, in a Spanish dance with all the lively, in a Spanish costume and atmosphere, the Spanish costume and atmosphere. The all-star cast is headed by Hope Hampton.

"FIGHTING BLADE" There is nothing new under the sun, including bobbed hair, avers Richard Barthelmess, who is currently being starred at the Majestic theater in "The Fighting Blade."

Mr. Barthelmess is right. His own hair was permitted to grow so that it might be bobbed for his current picture. For in it he is a Roundhead. And the Roundheads were the parliamentary party in England in the civil war of 1642-1649, so-called because their hair was bobbed. Their opponents, the cavaliers, wore their hair long.

CASINO TODAY

While she was making "Little Old New York," her new picture, which is the attraction at the Casino theater today for four days, Miss Davies was approached by an interviewer who was surprised to find her eyes all red and a vagrant tear or two still coursing down her cheeks. She smiled and wiped her eyes and explained: "I've just been making a scene in which I had to cry and I can't get over it all at once."

"Little Old New York" was adapted to the screen by Luther Reed from the stage play by Rida Johnson Young.
